Braemar Hill Stream

Braemar Hill, North Point, Hong Kong

Situated on the breezy and tranquil slopes of Braemar Hill, Braemar Hill Stream is a perfect way to escape the hectic atmosphere of downtown Hong Kong, while still staying close to the city. Clear stream water filled with freshwater creatures and a variety of plants run through a valley of boulders and rocks, overlooking the famous city skyline, creating the perfect combination of urban and natural environments.

Tiny waterfall upstream

A short, pleasant walk* from Braemar Hill Road will lead you to the stream. There, you can walk up and trace the stream all the way to its source, passing a small waterfall, pools of water filled with freshwater animals and large rocks. Keep in mind that tracing the stream will require you to climb over rocks and boulders, as there is no walking path.

From starting point (see map behind):

- Follow trail until you see a staircase leading up and another trail going straight. Keep going straight!
- You will soon come to another division with the sign 'Po Luen Path': turn left and follow it
- Stick to the trail and you will arrive at a stone bridge. You can enjoy the stream's beauty from the pagoda (see map) located right next to it, or follow stream upwards.

Starting point- Braemar Hill Road

*Difficulty- 2/5 (3/5 if tracing stream). Give yourself around half a day to walk and explore the area.
