

Food Culture

www.cis.edu.hk/Sec/ss/Geography/Year10+/Hong\_Kong\_mini\_guides

Bored of high-end restaurants and traditional dim sums? Here is a special taste of Hong Kong's local cuisine.

德昌魚蛋粉 Duk Cheung Noodle Shop 88 Fuk Lo Tsun Road, Kowloon City, Hong Kong.

Entrance to the noodle shop

A fifteen minute walk from the MTR station, situated in a district full of a variety of restaurants, is a local noodle store. Here, one can experience the rush of the Hong Kong lifestyle as well as some delicious soup noodles.

Unlike normal restaurants, there are no neatly uniformed waiters, comfortable chairs, or even a private table for you and your company. There are a few people around the store dressed similarly and constantly shouting orders at each other, bright orange plastic stools, and large round tables for you to dine with strangers. This is the Hong Kong local culture.

However, despite all that, the wide selection of soup noodles served with home-made fish balls and other accompanying dishes are one of the best representatives of Hong Kong soup noodles. They would leave you wanting to come back for more.

Travelers' code of ethics:

Acquaint yourself with the local customs. Respect local customs; people will be happy to help you.

One of the accompanying dishes – home-made dumplings.

Food Culture

As bus service to this area is limited, the best way to get there is via the MTR to Lok Fu, then walk from exit B and along Junction Road to the Noodle shop. This is displayed on the map.

Melody 11am
Chinese International School
cis_info@cis.edu.hk